What's Said in White House Reportedly Leaked Verbatim

By Benjamin Welles

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31 (NYT). -An account of a White House strategy meeting, published yesterday, asserts that, during the recent war between India and Pakistan, administration officials proposed to let Jordan or Saudi Arabia "quietly" transfer American-furnished arms to Pak-

The account, published in the internationally syndicated coiumn of Jack Anderson, reportedly incensed White House officials, as have other recent Anderson columns that have quoted verba-tim from intelligence digests, State Department and other govcrnment cabiegrams and even from minutes of secret White House meetings. Rumors of the administration's behind-the-scenes plan to help Pakistan-which in fact was abandoned-have been published previously. But Mr. Anderson is the first journalist to cite partici-pants in the White House meet-ings of Dec. 6 and 8 and to quote from their policy proposals.

According to informants in the executive branch, White House officials have strongly criticized their colleagues in the same department, accusing them of leaking information to Mr. Anderson. These informants said the State Department vigorously denied the imputations and charged instead that the source of the leaks was probably the National Security Council staff

Mr. Anderson, citing the "miscalculations and misrepresenta-tions" that entangled the United States in a "jungle war in far-away Vietnam," started his column today by declaring his intention to "publish highlights from the secret White House papers dealing with the crisis" between India and Pakistan.

"These papers bear a variety of stamps—'secret sensitive.' 'eyes only,' 'specat' (special category), 'exclusive,' 'nofor,' (no foreign dissemination), and other classifications even more exotic," he wrote.

U.S. Air Agency Plans to Ease Its Rules on Charter Flights

By Richard Witkin

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31 (NYT).

This is for groups of 30 or more persons from a boarter flights available to any--The Civil Aeronautics Board acted yesterday to make low-cost charter flights available to anyone, regardless of membership in a special club or society, but pas-senger lists would have to be made up six months in advance

A high agency official called the action "one of the most im-portant moves we've made in 20

The newly proposed rule can-not be finally adopted until late February or early March, after airlines, travel agents and other parties have a further chance to make their views known. Unless an unexpected obstacle bars the way, the indications are that the five-man board will make the more relaxed charter rules official at that time. This would make it possible for the rules to apply to a part of next summer's peak travel season. Secor D. Browne, chairman of the CAB, said of the proposed

"This will bring low-cost air travel to a bigger part of tha population who are not necessarily three-legged Armenians or librarians from Ashtabula belonging to a librarians' society." Six Months Notice

Specifically, the rule would allow a charter organizer to form miscellaneous groups of 50 or more persons for the purpose of chartering an aircraft. But there would be several restrictions-including the need to file a main and standby passenger list six months in advance, the requirement, for long-in-advance fare payments, and a ban on mass advertising-simed at avoiding the diversion of large numbers of passengers from regular noncharter airline trips.

The current summer-sesson fare on a chartered fully loaded conventional jet is about $175 round trip between New York and London. Under the proposed rule, that is the fare anyone could take advantage of. Under current plans, the cheapest non-charter fare the sched-

offered to extend his deadine for the withdrawal of all british locked from Malta from midnight tonight to Jan. 15.

Mr. Mintoff said the decision was made in the interest of peace and humane consideration for the dependent families with British forces on the Mediterranean island.

we are doing this on the understanding that your forces in Malta will desist from carrying out any incitement against the legitimate government of this island and will confine their activities entirely and exclusively to 'Operation Exit.'"

Mr. Mintoff's last-minute decision postponed a showdown with Britain over his original ultimatum. It was already clear, how-ever, that Britain was ignoring the deadline and planning to go ahead with a phased withdrawal. The British attitude was that the rent for its bases on the island had been paid through March Mr. Mintoff had demanded an additional £4.25 million by midnight tonight.

Mr. Mintoff's statement was eleased here less than four hours before the expiry of his ultimatum. The statement indicated that the postponement de-cision was taken at a cabinet meeting on Wednesday that considered a message from Mr.
Heath that Britain would under-take preparations for the with-drawal "straightaway" but added that the process of withdrawal would require some time.

Earlier today, the British forces on the island cancelled weekend leaves and hegan preparations for withdrawal, while Mr. Mintoff backed by pledges of Libyan sopmed prepared for a show-

Britain. Mr. Mintoff flew to Libya yesterday to seek financial support from the oil-rich Arab state after Britain announced that it was preparing to withdraw from the island rather than meet his latest demands for more money in return for military bases.

Although there would be no movement out of Malta by the midnight deadline set by Mr. Mintoff for the complete evacuation of the 3,500 British troops and their 7,000 dependents, a big transit center for departing service families was being prepared at the Royal Air Force base at Fal Par, about 10 miles from Valletta.

Britain Vetoes UN Resolution To Oppose Rhodesian Accord

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y., Dec. 31 (Reuters)—Britain used its veto in the Security Council last night to kill an African-backed resolution to reject in advance British proposals for a settlement with Rhodesia.

It was only the sixth time in the UN's 26-year history that Britain had resorted to its veto power. The last occasion was in November, 1970, when it vetoed an Afro-Asian call upon it not to recognize independence in Rhodesia before black majority. Rhodesia before black majority

The council voted 9 to 1—the one dissent being Britain's veto for the resolution to reject any Rhodesian independence not based on majority rule as de-termined by universal adult suffrage. There were five absten-tions in the council voting. The nine positive votes—the number necessary for the draft's adoption—were cast by Somalia, Sierra Leone, Burundi, the Soviet Union, Poland, Syria, China, Argentina and Nicaragua.

Belgium, France, the United States, Japan and Italy abstained. The British ambassador, Sir Colin Crowe, urged the council before the vote to suspend its judgment until the people of Rhodesia had had the chance to express themselves upon the settle-ment proposals.

Claiming that the proposals, in adopted, would reverse the "present downhill course in Rhodesia leading inexorably to the preci-pice of apartheid," Sir Colin said the council owed it to the Rhodesian people "to allow them to make up their own minds on their own future after mature and quiet deliberation."

The resolution, presented by Somaliz with Burundi and Syria as co-sponsors, called for a secret referendum on the basis of oneman, one-vote, to test the wishes of the Rhodesian peopla about their political future.

It also urged the participation of UN observers in any "accept-ability test" of the settlement proposals among Rhodesians. Evacuate Theater Before It's Wrecked BELFAST, Dec. 31 (UPI).— Hundreds of children fled to safety today before a giant bomb exploded and heavily damaged a Beliast motion-picture theater where they were watching a Walt Disney film in a matinee.

Police said the alarm was sounded by two youths after they saw a 100-pound gelignite bomb in the open trunk of a stolen car parked at the entrance to the Kensington Hotel in downtown Belfast. The bomb was said by police to be the largest used in 28 months of violence in Ulster. All 300 children in the theater hext door were led to safety, police said. They filed out the theater'e main entrance and past the car as the bomb's fuse grew shorter, witnesses reported.

The bomb exploded about an hour later, leaving an 8-by-2-foot crater where the car had been. Police said the theater's interior was hissted to pieces and the hotel was also heavily damaged. Pieces of the car were found in a schoolyard 50 yards away. Eight Slightly Hurt

A police spokesman said that eight persons in the blast area suffered cuts and bruises. The hotel was evacuated before the hlast, police reported.

In Londonderry, bomb explosions blew out the front of a women's fashion shop and touched off a fire in a cloth shop.

Police said gunmen planted the bombs and gave customers and employees several minutes to evacuate the shops before the devices exploded. There were no injuries, police said.

Stating that the document would be studied by the Catholic and Anglican leaderships "with interest and attention," it point-ed out that full agreement on the sacrament of communion had not yet been reached by the two churches.

"The central question of the ministry of the eucharist is not touched upon since this will be subject of a special session of the mixed commission, in September, 1972," the Vatican

This was a reference to the problem of the status of Anglican ordinations, which were formally declared null and void in 1896 by Pope Leo XIII.

The statement said the com-mission in its document spoke of big steps forward on the road to working out an agreement on the eucharist.

The document recognized, however, "that the agreement is not complete, and that there are still essential points to clarify." in-cluding the central question of the ministry, the Vatican added.

The agreement "commits, for the moment, only the members of the commission," it stated. In an apparent expression of annoyance that the document had been released to the British press. the Vatican statement said that "it had been foreseen that the publication would come in theological reviews."

Sources in the Vatican pointed out that although the agreement is not yet official and should eventually form only a part of detailed agreements on Anglican-Roman Catholic doctrinal prob-lems, it is still an important step toward eventual reconciliation be-tween the two churches.

complicated a transatlantic airfare battle that has been raging since spring.

Underlying the struggle are such ingredients as: The increasing portion of the market that has been grabbed by non-scheduled all-charter lines, both American and European; the effort of American and foreign scheduled lines to stop the invasion with bergain fares of their own; and the wholesale disregard of hard-to-enforce rules governing who could or could not be offered

Some groups charter entire airplanes. Some flights are made np of groups of 40 or more persons from separate individual clubs (the number will drop to 30 on scheduled lines for groups starting out in Europe).

What has happened more and more is the development of an illicit charter business. Tour operators, particularly in New York and other large cities, will sign up entire aircraft, often in name of a fictitious society. They will fill up seats by selling tickets to any would-be customer,

Data on Space By Harold M. Schmeck Jr. WASHINGTON, Dec. 31 (NYT). -Tha National Aeronautics and Space Administration and the Soviet Academy of Sciences have agreed to a detailed exchange of information on the biological effects of space flight. Meetings of experts from the space programs of both nations are to be held at least once a year, according to an announcement from the space agency here. The announcement said, "These meetings will include the ex-change of pre, post, and in-flight data in aufficient detail to assure a full understanding of the flight experience of each country from a physiological and medical view-The details were agreed upon in meetings in Moscow in October by a joint working group of representatives from both space programs. A spokesman for the American space agency explained that an agreement in principle to exchange data was reached almost a year ago, but the details were left for future negotiation. During the meetings in October the working group called for a meeting to be held in the United States in May to discuss not only flight data but methods of predicting the "state of the human organism during and after space The agreement also calls for other working sessions to discuss tha effects of space flight on the heart and circulatory system, the endocrine system, fluid balance within the body and the central nervous system. Effects on all these important aspects of body function have been observed during American manned space flights. A space agency officer noted today that much data is already available through the regularly published scientific journals of both countries. The new agreement will speed the exchange of data and will augment it through face-to-face discussions by groups of experts, he said. The agreement also calls for exchange of a small number of accientists to work in appropriate space-research laboratories of the other country.

The joint working group has already exchanged reports on the Soviet Union's Soyuz and the American Apollo manned space-flight programs.

Mariner-9 Alters Orbit to Map More Of Mars Surface

PASADENA, Calif. Dec. 31 (AP).—Mariner-9 altered its orbit about Mars yesterday in a maneuver scientists hope will allow completion of its photographic mapping mission, seriously hampered by a three-month-old dust

Acting on orders from an onboard computer programed earlier by ground commands, Mariner-9 ignited its tiny rocket engine for a 17-second firing, Controllers at the California Institute of Technology's jet propulsion laboratory here received confirmation later via radio signals that the firing was successful.

The engine firing was to raise Mariner-9's orbit so that it passes within 1,025 miles of Mars on each orbit, instead of 862 miles. The original orbit was achieved Nov. 13, when Mariner-9 fired its engine to become the first spacecraft to orbit another planet

One of Mariner-9's primary objectives is to map 70 percent of Mars's surface with two television cameras, Since Mariner entered orbit, the storm has gradually subsided until usable pictures often can be obtained. But only six weeks remain before the end of the 90-day mission, and it was necessary to raise the spacecraft so its cameras could take in more of the planet with each picture.

Mr. Duel's girl friend, Diane Ray, 29, telephoned police from his Hollywood Hills bouse at 1:25 a.m. "in a highly emotional state," police said. Sgt. Dan Cook said: "Apparent-

Halting Nuclear Tests

Adjournment of the Strategic Arms Limitation Talks (SALT) in Vienza, without the year-end agreement to which the White House and Kremlin committed themselves last May, demonstrates again the slow pace of progress in curbing the atomic arms race. It brings into question the wisdom of delaying other nuclear negotiations that could contribute to this goal and, particularly, exploration of a comprehensive treaty banning all nuclear tests, including those underground.

The American case against a comprehensive test-ban has been based on the difficulty in verifying compliance without on-site inspection, something that is anathema to Moscow. To overcome this obstacle, the United States in the past decade has spent $274 million in research on means of detecting and identifying nuclear explosions, moetly by eeismic methods. It is increasingly evident that a genuine breakthrough has been achieved.

The extent of this breakthrough has just been underlined in a report by a prestigious committee of the Federation of American Scientists, including former presidential science advisers George Kistiakowsky and Franklin Long, former Pentagon research chief Herbert York and the former science chief of the CIA, Herbert Scoville. They state that recent improvements in long-range seismology and other unilateral means of detection—presumably satellite photography and communications monitoring-provide high confidence that violations of a comprebensive test-ban would be detected.

Specifically, the report states, the United States could be sure of detecting violations long before illicit underground tests could develop new weapons threatening the stability of the nuclear balance. Even unrestricted Soviet testing below the level easily spotted by seismic and other national means would achieve nothing more than wasteful further refinements in very small tactical nuclear weapons. In fact, the difficulties in carrying out on-site inspections appear so considerable and the benefits so small that the United States would have no need to go through with them even if Moscow agreed to permit them. Much of the American opposition to a comprehensive test-ban does not stem from fear of Soviet cheating any more, the report argues, but from a Pentagon desire to continue American testing. New weapons, however, are not needed to maintain the American deterrent, which already is much greater than required. After a SALT agreement, particularly, there will be no need to test new warheads for antiballistic missiles (ABM's) and MIRV multiple warhead mis-

A comprehensive test-ban, on the other hand, would bulwark American and world security by slowing the arms race, reinforcing the nuclear nonproliferation treaty and reducing the likelihood of other countries joining the nuclear club. Soviet officials informally have indicated a willingness to open new test-ban talks. The United Nations General Assembly, by vote of 112 to 0 with only one abstention, bas urged the Geneva Conference to pursue a test-ban. An early move by the Nixon administration to initiate test-ban negotiations is clearly warranted. THE NEW YORK TIMES.

Money, Poverty and Peace

Twelve leading economists from North America, Western Europe and Japan have warned that despite the monetary and trade agreement negotiated by the Group of Ten in Washington, "the underlying and basic issues remain." They fear these will lead to what could become a still more serious crisis, both economic and political.

If a reminder were needed of the crucial relationship between solving international economic problems and preserving world peace, it has just been provided by the war between India and Pakistan and the emergence of Bangladesh as a new and agonizingly poor nation. In South Asia, violent passions have been directed by poor nations against poor neighbors, but on a global scale the surge of resentment of the poor nations sgainst the rich should become explosive in the years ahead.

of Ten-the "Rich Men's Club"-said nothing about the poor countries, although the ministers and central bank governors agreed that discussions should be "promptly undertaken" to consider long-term reform of the international monetary system. However, the report of the 12 economists makes the fresh proposal that world monetary reform be linked to an improved flow of aid to the have-not countries.

The current thinking of government planners in the major countries is that the International Monetary Fund should create tens of billions of dollars worth of special drawing rights-or paper gold-to supply the world's needs for the future growth of monetary reserves. The independent economists recommend that a significant fraction of new SDRs be set aside for international development lending.

Some economists see a threat to the stability of the monetary system in such a proposal. Although there will certainly be bitter disputes over the future allocation of SDRs and the danger of inflationary overissue is real, the rich industrial nations could make a fatal blunder if they miss the opportunity to tie world monetary reform to increasing the resources available to the poor countries. Indeed, the rich lands could thereby help themselves by strengthening demand for their own goods.

The 12 economists have been far-sighted in urging elimination of all remaining tariffs on industrial goods over a ten-year period, a gradual phasing out of present quotas, and a world agricultural negotiation aimed at limiting high-price domestic policies that build up surpluses and thereby lead to import barriers.

The realignment of exchange rates, widening of bands around parity and the elimination of the Aug. 15 protectionist measures by the United States give a great opportunity to the United States, Europe and Japan to move toward a bolder liberalization of international trade and investment. Not only does the unity and stability of the advanced industrial nations depend on pursuing that course, but so does the peaceful development of the poor nations. If, despite lip service to liberal principles, the industrialized countries aggressively pursue their individual nationalistic policies. the "most significant monetary agreement in the history of the world" could become nothing more than a truce on the way toward economic and political disaster. THE NEW YORK TIMES.

International Opinion

Peking, Moscow and Bangladesh

For Peking the fall of Dacea and the establishment of Bangladesh do not mean the end of the conflict centered around East Pakistan. The Chinese leadership regards that conflict not merely as a regional clash or a "legacy of British colonialism." From the outset it has seen the international significance of that struggle as u new phase in the three-way confrontation between Peking, Moscow and Washington. In the Chinese view it is not just a matter of India versus Pakistan, but in reality of Russia versus China, with India being used as an instrument for the "encirclement" of China. Peking does not admit defeat and is predicting that from now on there will be no peace on the south Asian subcontinent and that India has yet to taste the bitter fruits of its victory. Thus, in the course of the India-Pakistan conflict, the clash between Peking and Moscow has become even more bitter and vehement, and south Asia, like all other areas where Soviet and Chinese intereste conflict, seems in the process of becoming a field of maneuvering and battle between the two Communist rivals. -From the Neue Zuercher Zeitung

Year of the Somersault This was the year of the diplomatic somersault. The joint decision by Chairman Mao and President Nixon to make the world safe for triangular diplomacy culminated symbolically and appropriately at the United Nations when the two countries voted together against the Soviet Union and India.

The year 1971 has produced a sea-change in world affairs in at least three areas. It bas pushed the always shifting storm center of big power relations decisively away from Europe and toward Asia. It has shown that the Chinese want to play a forceful role in world affairs but with the self-proclaimed proviso that they are not a superpower like the other two. It has produced an aggravation and a reawakening of two old animositles, between India and Pakistan and-looking ahead-between China and Japan.

1972: A Presidential Year for the U.S.

By James Reston

Year's Eve, President Nixon appealed first for human peace and pity, and then ordered the heaviest bombing of North Vietnam in over three years, and nobody was quite able to reconcile the gentle words and the destruc-

It is a curious business: Peace on earth and pass the ammuni-tion! But that's the way 1971 was in this perplexing city. It started with Nixon proclaiming a New American Revolution of individual freedom and predicting a vast increase in the GNP; and it ended with wage and price controls and the largest peacetime deficit in American history.

Still, it is easier to understand Nixon'e new economic policy and his new China policy—even to congratulate him on both—than to understand his sudden violent lunge at North Vietnam during Christmas week.

Clear Dilemma

His dilemma in Vietnam is clear enough: The more men he brings home, the more vulnerable are the men who remain, and there-fore, the greater his responsibility to protect his dwindling army.

Hanol also has a dilemma: The more Nixon, withdraws from the ground lighting and relies on air power, the more it presses the Soviets for air defense and sends Russian MiG fighters into the air to challenge the attacking American bombers. But this doesn't resolve the dilemmas; it only deepens them.

For the more Nixon bombs North Vietnam, the more determined the enemy will be to take a nasty nip at the American expeditionary force as it leaves, and the more he bombs from the U.S. aircraft carriers, the more Hanol will be asking for the sophisticeted missiles Moscow gave the Egyptians in order to attack and neutralize the highly vulnerable U.S. aircraft carriers in the South China Sea.

It has been clear now for years that Moscow and Peking are not going to allow American power to overwhelm the North Vietnamese—this is one of the very few things Communist Russia and Communist China agree on-and that they are going to give Hanot the weapons essential to combat whatever weapons the United States uses against them.

Nixon knows this better than anybody else. He has known for a long time that the North Vietnamese were gathering an air defense. He had his associates warn the press here about it as soon as Eanol put its MiGs into the air. But there is no evidence that Hanoi's MiGs presented an immediate danger to the American command-it was almost painful to watch Secretary of Defense Laird searching for words to justily the Christmas raids on North Vietnam -- so presumably there

Nixon's Pattern

One can only guess at the explanation, because at the end of Nixon's third year in office there is an almost complete breakdown of trustful communication between the administration and the press. But the pattern of action by the President, especially when he has suffered an important diplomatic or strategic reverse—as he has just sustained in the Indian-Pakistani conflict-is fairly obvious.

If you study his self-revealing book, "Six Crises," you get at least an inkling of his psychology. When he loses, he lashes back, which in some cases is an ad-mirable quality; otherwise he

1960 and his humiliating defeat by Pat Brown in the California gubernatorial race of 1962. But, as in his blow-up against the press after losing to Brown, when he announced his "last press conference," cometimes he goes In adversity, he has a weakness for the dramatic gesture. Are things going badly in Vietnam? Suddenly he invades Cambodia and later Laos. Does be look impotent after the failure of his diplomacy in the Indian-Pakistani war, with Russia now favored in India and his Pakistani friends in retirement and disgrace? Well, don't take Richard Nixon for granted. Unpredictability is sometimes a virtue. He covers his failures with action. When in trouble in one field, divert attention to another, would have vanished politically after his defeat by Kennedy in Are the headlines stressing the powerlessness of America in India and Pakistan? Demonstrate American air power in Vietnam. But in any event, change the question and dominate the news! In the short run, it is a brilliant demonstration of political tactics, and his old adversaries in press and television are patsies for the dramatic maneuver and give it the big beadline, but every bang leaves its doubt, and every successful maneuver, even when it commands the headlines, leaves a drop of poison.

And this is where we are at the beginning of the new year—or so it seems here—alive, but confused and divided. And the paradox of it is that the new year is a presidential election year, and the central issue of the election may very well be between the men who are clever and the men who can

The Cost of Bombing in Indochina

By Anthony Lewis

LONDON Before 1967, more than 100,000 people lived in the Plain of Jars. They got in the way of American bombers operating over Laos, but this inconvenience was removed in a way reminiscent of Swifte "A Modest Proposal": The inhabitants were all either killed or forced out of their homes as refugees. That is one example, not a particularly large one, of what the United States has done in Indochina in the name of democracy and self-fietermination. The figures are so huge, so horrendous, that they may no longer mean anything to the Americans who read them.

Prof. Arthur H. Westing of Windham College, Vermont, estimated the other day that there are "several hundred thouse unexploded bombs and shells in Vietnam alone. (There are many more in Laos and Cambodia). What does that mean, unless one sees a photograph of a small Indochinese boy who picked up what looked like a toy in a field and now has bandages over the stumps of his arms?

E. W. Pfaiffer, a University of Montana zoologist who has just finished an environmental study in Vietnam with Westing, tells that American bombing has left 20 million craters. They range from 20 to 50 feet wide and 5 to 20 feet deep.

Nor is bombing the only American technique of mass destruction. There is the defoliation that affected one-eighth of the acreage of South Vietnam, destroying food crops for 600,000 people and vast miles of valuable forest. There are the 150 bull-dozers working every day to strip land of all cover-even more damaging ecologically than her-bickies, according to Mesers. Westing and Pfeiffer, There is the "Daisy Cutter" bomb, which they estimate has so far killed every living thing in 116,000 scres of Indochina.

In a war all sides commit acts of cruelty. But there is a qualitative difference, a moral difference, in the methods used by the U.S. in this war.

It is, increasingly, an automated war for the Americans. Killing is done at a distance, without the killers having to face the un-pleasant reality of human beings mutilated or dead right there in front of them.

The world's most technologically-developed country is using all its skill in destructive techniques against a peasant population. And against people who are not white-a fact that we may tell ourselves is happenstance but that much of the world considers no accident.

'Sanctuaries'

American officials so often show an astounding insensitivity to the consequences of our war methods. There was a remark the other day that must have set a record for official blindness. A Pentagon spokesman said that Hanoi's refusal to accept 900 gift packages for American prisoners

-that while American planes were carrying out 1,000 bombing sorties on North Vietnam. There is a similar arrogance in some of the reasons given for the resumption of large-scale bombing. The North Victnamese had ettacked "unarmed U.S. reconnaissance planes," American since those reconnaissance planes are accompanied by armed fight-And North Vietnam had been used "as a sanctuary." It was said, to attack American planes bombing Laos. What about American "sanctuaries" in Thailand or on carriers standing off the North Vietnamese coast?

The official view is apparently that the U.S. has a divine right to fly and bomb at will over the Indochinese peninsula entire without challenge by enemy aircraft or missiles. If the North Vietnamese dare to put up an air defense, we are entitled to purish them. It is a notion fitter for psychological than for political analysis.

It is against this background of American war methods and attitudes that the decision to renew heavy bombing in north must be judged.

Those five days of bombingand how many more days in the future?—will cost dearly. The world has fresh reason to doubt what most people once took for granted; the fundamental decency of America. Worse yet, Americans will feel revived in themselves those terrible self-hatreds and doubts about the integrity of the political process that almost tore the country apart in

Even those who think such moral costs are piffle should worry about the consequences for effective American influence in the world. For what we have done in Vietnam—and what we are now dramatically seen to be doing still—has crippled our abilgive diplomacy a chance and avoid the use of force.

That was clear in the India-Pakistan crisis. We simply could not be taken seriously when we said to India in effect: "The said to India in effect: kind of interests we are pursuing in Vietnam justify resort to bloodshed, but yours do not."

The Cold War Muskie's Views

By Rowland Evans and Robert Novak

WASHINGTON. - On the evening of Dec. 15 at the Man-Feinberg, Sen. Edmund S. Muskie put his views on the cold war in a form considerably more concrete-and more leftish-than the generalizations of his set compaign speeches.

Speaking to some 25 Democratic money men invited for a buffet dinner, Musice gave this overview of one vital part of Washington-Moscow nifairs: the Soviet Union cannot be blamed for the arms race any more than the United States: rather, both nations must share the blame. Such evenhanded blame between the Kremlin and the White House is scarcely novel to liberal intellectuals. But to the voting public (including rank-and-file olue-collar Democrats), the Muskle overview will smack of

'era of negotiation" and at odds with Muskie's centrist image. Indeed, Muskie's formulation on the arms race lends some credence to the argument endlessly put forth by his leftish staffer in their efforts to woo the Democratic party's left frings: the ditference between Musicle and Sen. George McGovern, doyen of that fringe, is strictly a matter of style; under the skin, there is no

rank heresy even in the Nixon erious disagreement. True or not, McGovern would not have greatly amended the reply given by Muskie at the Feinberg dinner when asked why it was necessary for the U.S. to spend so much for national de-

They match' it with Muskie's emotional statement that the Attica prison riot and killings were "more stark proof that something is terribly wrong in America." Such professions of guilt, though

Now that the first stage of the crisis on the Indian subcontinent has come to a close, I think we might look over it and evaluate the so-called 'peacemakers' of this world.

Actually when one thinks it over, nothing new has struck me. The crisis only served to reiterate the incompetence of that "preserver of peace," commonly known as the UN, and the childishness of many of the men who are supposedly endowed with cartain quantities of wisdom, in whose hands our destinies have vast Brussels tapestries of the 16th century relating the story of David and Bathsheba over an area of about a quarter of an acre with great technical and narrative refinement. Each tapestry represents several consecutive scenes in furtaposition, according to a narrative procedure quite frequently encountered in Fiemish art. The state of conservation is outstanding and the sequence is without a doubt one of the most important specimens of this school of tapestry to have survived to this day. Of special charm are the occasional landscapes shown in perspective.

The recurrent nightmare of many artists in our civilization seems to deal with alienation— Aresti (above) seems to refer to it, and so too, in his own language, does Irving Petlin. In his raintings and pastels, he has figures wrapped in bandages like mummies, masked figures, Golemlike marching figures, landscapes with uncertain and disquieting perspectives. Campigli used wasp-waisted women or their bland, Etruscaneyed faces as so many stones in a mosaic or lined them up to look like votive figures on a pagan altar. In his stone-colored oils, long friezes of little goddesses and their related shapes, are separated from each other in boxlike compartments, or flutter in flocks like flights of pigeons - forming elaborate patterns in muted blues, blunds and candy pinks. "I have always searched for a final formula to paint a face. I am still searching..." Campigli wrote. Condon, Dec. 31 (IHT).— Feeling jaded among the dregs of 1971, I was surprised to hear a German producer deliver a panegyric on British theater and its many brilliant actors. Both the Royal Court and the Royal Shakespeare Company have had a splendid time. At the Aldwych, Harold Pinter tri-umphed not only with his "Old Times" but with his even more enjoyable production of James Joyce's "Exiles," and there were notable revivals of Gorkl's "Ene-mies," Genet's "The Balcony," and, of course, Peter Brook's miraculous and magical version of "A Midsummer Night's Dream."

The Royal Court produced Marguerite Duras's "The Lovers of Viorne" with the spell-binding Peggy Ashcroft, and two popular and critical successes, John Osborne's "West of Suez" and David Storey's minimal, engross-ing "The Changing Room." But more impressive, although it proved to be too much for audiences to stomach, was Edward Bond's ferocious reworking of "Lear." a bleak and brutal modern tragedy, full of blood and

O'Neill's play seemed particularly apt for, if there were a common theme to be found in the work of British playwrights, it was a similar, antoblographical examination of roots, a nostalgic return to the past. John Mor-timer was witty and affectionate in "A Voyage Round My Father," which brought Alec Guinness back to the stage, Peter Nichols was more bitter, and funnier, with his memories of war-time adolescence "Porget-Me-Not Lane," and David Mercer was unforgiving in his brilliant "After Haggerty."

For me, his play was saved by Ralph Richardson's acting, quirky and unpredictable. The year also had a bravura performance from Alan Badel as Kean in Jean-Paul Sartre's comedy. emerged as a fine and exciting actor, particularly brilliant as o tortured intellectual in "Extles." Wilfrid Hyde White, too, managed in his unflappable way to suggest that something interest-ing was happening in James Bridle's awful "Meeting at Night." Some good plays failed, among them Michael Freyn's comedy of a happy man, "The Sandboy," and Charles Dyer'e "Mother Adam." the last of his trilogy dealing with loneliness. Robert Shaw's "Cato Street Conspiracy" at the Young Vic was muddled and confused, in spite of Vanessa Redgrave, or even because of her, since she cut the play from four bours and also took over the production. But the theme, of working class revolt, and much of the writing were powerful enough to hope that Shaw will rework his unwieldy material.

The low spots were provided by Andy Warbol's "Pork" and Tom Eyen's "The Dirtlest Show in Town," which managed to make sex and nudity seem perverse and boring Shakespeare's "Othello" was brutally murdered at the Mermaid, who made amends with a production of Bernard Shaw's "John Bull's Other Island," with ite relevant insights into the Anglo-Irish situation.

Among new writers, the Royal Court discovered the comic talents of Trinidad-born, Muhta-pha Maxsra. While Mr. Osborne atacked young revolutionaries as doing violence to language, seven young writers produced "Lay By" at The Open Space, a scarifying series of variations on a pornographic theme. Of this group. which combines black comedy with impressive technical skill in pop theater, the outstanding member is Howard Brenton who, hopefully, will write a full length play before long.

Although still insular, London caught up with the work of Peter Handke, and Arrabal, with Jean-Louis Barrault's emberant "Rabelais" and Le Théatre du Soleil's "1789," And two new theaters opened.

In Euston Road, Michael Croft's Shaw Theatre presented two plays by Peter Terson, one of Britain's most individual writers who is scandalous'v neglected by metropolitan audiences. The Art Market: Indecision, Instability and Junk

By Souren Melikian

PARIS, Dec. 31 (DHT).—Certain sales at the Hotel Drouot in Paris are a reliabla guide to real price levels on the art market as well as to changing consumer tastes. These are the typical, everyday sales where objects of all descriptions are auctioned. It is rare indeed that speculators or great collectors attend them.

Objects are auctioned without the advice of experts and there is no catalogue. The only way you are likely to know when such a sale is coming up is if you pass by Drouot and see one of those shabby posters, in strident Tellow, red and green, plastered against To be fair, there are sometimes announcements in the French newspapers—in minuscule type at the bottom of the art page. Drouot publishes its own Gazette—but it isn't much help to the items to be sold. Consequently, the people who turn up are usually old Drouot hands. There is the monomaniacal collector who makes his daily rounds in the remote hope of unearthing a treasure. Then there is the Flea Market dealer who spends part of his day routinely rummaging through basketfuls of trash. A third type is the stray onlooker in search of amusement.

'The latest auction of this type (on Wednesday) was quite revealing. It confirmed some recent trends at posher sales in London and Paris. Conventional late 19th-century painting (particularly Victorian works of which Sotheby's Belgravia had made a specialty under Marcus Linell's leadership) has been rising in categorized (and, indeed, titled) but theatrically. This explains "Mindscapes." There is an ex-

Obviously this sort of thing could never make it on the art market. Not so long ago, dealers who acquired them in lots along with other objects, simply threw them away. They didn't have the courage to carry them back to their shops. Judging by Wednesday's sale, it seems that even these objects have made it.

The Objects

There was a buge, boat-shaped vessel, well over 50 centimeters long, described by the auctioneer as "metal." It was graced at either end with feminine silhouettes, arms raised as if they wanted to shed the scanty dress that clung miraculously to their ample

Bidding started at 100 frames. To my amazement, it finished Next came an enormous pewter fruit bowl again adorned with feminine figures. It was perfectly awful. Yet it sold for 646 francs. The climax came with a large, shell-shaped, shallow bronze bowl, with an artificial patina, upheld by three snarling cupids. It fetched 1.150 francs. In none of these cases were the buyers induced to acquire the objects by the same of their makers—or even by the hope of attributing them to someone important. Indeed, when the suctioneer put up a bronze which, he specified, had been "made after Falguière" (i.e. not by him), enthusiasm did not diminish.

This bronze woman in turn-of-the-century dress, standing by a peacock, sold for 640 francs. Rest assured, this stuff now has an established market, profitable enough for small Flea Market dealers to buy unhesitatingly. It was rather typical of such a sale that one of the better items was sold for a sum considerably under its true value. This was a bronze deer, bearing C. Valton's signature, of excellent workmanship, in a style as good as, if not superior to, the best of Mane'e work. At 928 francs, it made, in my opinion, about half its worth.

Other Trends

Other recent mixed sales ot Drouot have revealed some equally disturbing trends: A large number of good sliver services are sud-denly coming up for sale. Silver has long been considered a bluechip investment by middle-class families. It, of course, is impressive at receptions and ceremonial dinners and, at the same time, readily salable. In the past two years, such services have rarely come up for auction. Their reappearance on the market means people need ready money.

Another sign of weakness is the lack of enthusiasm for good, but second-rate post-impressionist and early 20th-century paintings. Over the past lew years, speculators had driven prices up considerably. But now, such works are becoming difficult to sell When 19th-century junk starts selling at high prices, when silver floods the salesroom, when good but not great paintings are hard to sell, it is clear that disorder, inconsistency, nucertainty are reigning in the lower and middle levels of the art market. One may well wonder whether this weakness will not reach the higher levels.

EEC Reacts to U.S. Charge Of Erecting Trade Barriers

By Clyde H. Farnsworth

PARIS, Dec. 81 (NYT).-"I tween the United States and the cannot conceive of the European Economic Community ever being anti-American," an official of the Common Market said recently in Brussels, "but I can conceive of it beins more independent of de-cision-making by Washington."

Europeaps have long felt that American political support for the community was dwindling, and with the increasingly barbed cristician now being flung both ways acres the Atlantic, they see a difficult period of adjustment as a new relationship is formed.

There are some Europeans who go so far at to charge that the United States is trying to break up the Common Market because it has become a strong competitive long that Washington is no longer able to manage.

This week's attack against Common Market farm and for-sign commercial policies made public by White House economic adviser Peter G. Peterson arouser energetic defensive reactions in Europe.

'Tragie' Barriers

Mr. Peterson accused the com-munity, in the most censorious official document yet issued in the post-Ang, 15 economic offen-sive, of constructing "tragic" and unjustified barriers against out-side farm products and of split-ting the werld into block of influence threatening the postwar. trading system.

"What's tracic?—Are soys beans tracic?" one Brussels source retorted. "It would indeed be tracic," he went on, "If there was a disintegration of the farm policies. It would mean the end of the community,"

A Paris source said the Ameri-can-REC confrontation was even more serious than it appeared on the surface. He saw in the Peterson report an intensification of U.S. efforts to weaken the gom-

Collas is a Luxumbourg-based law firm which brought the pro-caedings on behalf of a still in-named international group, after the failure in October of the group's public tender effer for 80 million Bastogi shares at 2,800 ling each.

Optage said withdrawal of the proceptings removed the major obstacle hindering completion of the merger, although political problems might still remain.

Montadison declined to comment on press reports here that it bought Bastogi shares sequired by representatives of the international group to put an end to the local proceedings. They said the entry of the emerged Bastogi into a reconsti-titled Montedson control syndi-cate would kelp to balance the presence of the state; represented by ENI and Istituto per la Ricos-trusione Industriale and preserve the private nature of Montedison. It would also help Montedison achieve its stated aim of placing its financial and insurance interests in a separate financial company, as part of its current reorganization, they said.

The final conceivable obstacle to the merger is possible govern-ment opposition to the crossed shareholdings between Bastogi and Montedison, they added. · Government opposition could take the form of a refusal to grant the merger the fiscal bene-

WASHINGTON Dec. 31 (WP). This is the high-tide of the comomic forecasting season, and how that the calendar is actually turning into 1972, some of the confidence shown two or three months ago sesses to be croding.

Plebard Janusen reports in the Wall Street Journal that economists at their regular post-chartenas trade association in New Orleans showed "twinges of deuth" about the "conscious" freezest of gains running to $100 killion in next rear's gross national product.

"The consensus feregast is a mile wide and an inch deep," said New York business economist Alan Greenspan pas of Mr. Nixon's private economic edvisors.

Alex Lireszpan, pne of Mr. Nixon's private economic edvisors.
But the Bixon administration, in contrast to last year, is shout to line inself up with the constraint forecast. Tentatively the Council of Economic Agrises is using a $99 billion increase in its internal memoirs, which would be a gain of about 9 persent aimost two-thirds of it real, the rest initiation.

Wiggling Out of Recession

Wigging Out of Recession

Apytiting like this scenario would certainly be a big improvement over 1971, which just harely wiggled its way out of the 1970 recession. But the big question is whether the improvement in 1973 will be solid enough to pave the way for a second faur-year term for Richard Nixon. There are many Democrats who think that President Nixon by his gravestic turnaround on Aug. 15, in effect "steir" their economic issue. They observe that even if unemployment stays above 5 percent next year, there will be enough noticeshis change in the direction to make the economy
a "plus" for the Republicans during the campaign.

Mr. Okun and most other economists do not expect to see unemployment fall below 5 percent any time in 1972. Most forecasters think the rate will be closer to 5.5 percent even in late 1972. Herbert Stein, the new chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, is beginning to suggest that a 5 percent rate of unemployment is normal for these times—and it is true that with more women and younger people in the labor force, who find it harder to get and keep jobs, the unemployment rate is going to be stickier.

Unacceptable to Public There are two observations to make about this:

The nation cannot afford to consider 5 percept unemployment "normal" with the excessive jobless rates thereby implied for women, teenagers, and blacks. Specific programs, mostly on the training side, must be created to handle the

. Seven if the administration decides that it can consider 5 percent a normal unemployment rate, the public is not likely to go along. The jebless rate remains the most dramatic symbol in the public's mind of which way the economy is going. The public's judgment may be less sephisticated than that of the three wise men on the Economic Council—but there are more of them who vote.

The chances are that the economy is going to look and feel a lot better in 1972, just by comparison with 1971. The realignment of exchange rates could provide a great stabilizing farce, especially if money comes roaring back into Wall Street—as many observers think it will—bringing emphasic results to investors. It would seem logical that the economy, given those results, would not provide a rates—sharp issue for either party.

But if the twinges of doubt about 1972 prove to have any validity, President Mixon will be looking for more rabbits to pull out of the hat. It could be another nerve-wracking year.

A par value of a engrency has to be formally approved by the IMF while a "central rate" must only be notified. The device of central rates made legally pessible the effective devaluation of the dollar in advance of action by Congress formally raising the official price of gold.

Fed Pumps Dollars Into

By H. Erich Heinemann

NEW YORK, Dec. 31 (NYT).— The Federal Reserve System numbed $2.8 billion in temporary credit into the money market this week to offset seasonal pressures at year-end, the Fed's weekly statement showed yesterday.
This volume of oregit—in the form of repurphase agreements on Treasury bills, federal agency securities and bankers accept-ances—was extended to security dealers at rates ranging between 3 3/4 percent and 3 5/8 percent. In addition, the Fed bought another $423 million of securites out-

N.Y. Prices Ring Year Out On Upbeat

Small Investor Seen Main Market Factor

NEW YORK, Dec. 31 (IRT) .-New York Stock Exchange prices rang out the old year by posting a modest gain in fairly active trading today.

The Dow Jones industrial average rose 1.13 to finish 1971 at 890.20, Exactly one year ago the Dow stood at 838.92. Its 1971 high was 950.83 set April 28, and its low 797.97 on Nov. 23.

Advancing issues outnumbered decliners 934 to 512 today while volume totaled 14.04 million shares compared with 13.81 million yes-

1971 was a year characterized by several analysis as a "roller coaster." The stock market post-ed strong gains in the first three months, ran into a steep decline in October and Nevember and in October and November, and finished the year on a strong up-beat. In the past month alone, the Dow Industrials rose nearly 100 points.

The small investor dominated today's session. Market experts noted that many individuals wait until the last trading day of the year to take their market losses -or gains—as the case may be. Losses to be recorded on 1971 tax returns could be taken right up to the final bell today. Profits for 1971 tax purposes also could be taken—provided the sale was on a "cash basis." If someone sold at a profit today under the regular five-day delivery method, those profits will go on 1972 tay returns not 1971.

1972 tax returns, not 1971. Many analysts think the market's recent advance will continue into early 1972-although they caution that the market is overdue for a correction.

Bache & Co. believes that the first few sessions of 1972 could be pivotal in determining whether the correction will come early or later. If the new year gets off to a good start, it said, the market's upward momentum will reassert fixelf. Otherwise, Bache said, "we might get the correction that has been waiting Occidental Petroleum topped the most active list, rising 3/8 to 11 7/8. Federal National Mortgage "when issued" was second most active, rising 1 to 24 3/4. Federal National Mortgage's common also was heavily traded, closing up 3 7/8 at 98 1/4, a record high.

Blue chips closed with only minor changes. AT&T was off 1/4 at 44 3/4, Chrysler Ieli 3/8 to 28 5/8, Du Pent was unchanged at 145, General Electric was up 7/8 to 62 5/8 and GM rose 7/8 to 80 1/2. Prooter & Gamble gained 1/4 to 78 1/2, Jorsey Standard was up 1/8 to 78 3/4 while Texaco finished off 1/2 at 34 3/8.

On the American Exchange, the index closed at 25.59, up 1 from yesterday. Advancing issues outnumbered declines 718 to 300. Volume rose to 6,497,007 shares from 5,323,000.

Leading the most active list was TWA warrants, which closed at 25, down 3/4 from yesterday on volume of 129,200 shares. The bond markets closed the week and the year on a strong note, largely as the result of Fedcral Reserve Board activity. In the corporate sector prices advanced about 1/8 today and about 3/4 on the week, Governments were strong. The Treasury bill sector showed gains ranging from 8 basis points to 19. 'Top 20' Nations'

GNP Seen Rising 10% Next Year

MEW YORK, Dec. 31 (AP-DJ)

The combined gross national products (GNP) of the 20 leading con-Communist industrial nations in 1972 will rise nearly 10 percent over this year's level to $2,600 billion, according to a study relessed by McGraw-Hill Publications yesterday.

Projecting a 9.8 percent year-to-year increase in GNP, the study said rising prices would account for 4.9 percent of the rise and growth in production for 4.7 percent. GNP is the dollar value of a nation's output of goods and services. The study said three of the 20 nations would experience lower "real" growth in 1972 than in 1971. "Real" growth is the rise in GNP after deduction for price U.S. gross national preduct for 1972 was forecast at $1,150 billion pased on a 5.5 percent increase in volume of output and 3.3 percent price increase. Bespite the rise, the U.S. share of non-Com-munist GNP would decline to 44 percent from 47 percent in 1969. the study predicted. It said a 1 percent growth in volume of output forecast for West Germany and 2 percent for the Netherlands would reduce the overall Common Market growth rate to 3 percent from 3.7 percent in 1971. But the pace of infig-tion in the trading bloc would alow to 4.6 percent in 1972 from 6.2 percent this year, according to the study.

FINANCIAL NEWS AND NOTES

'Allied Won't Raise Bid for THF Allied Breweries Ltd. says it sees no reason to raise the value of its £145-million bid for Trust Houses Forte Ltd. (THF). Allied says it plans to continue its existing offer, which it considers fully reflects the value of THF. Allied adds that a THF statement formally rejecting the bid as "totally inadequate" did not contain any information to justify raising the offer.

Allied, which has been buying THF shares in the market, says it "must put all shareholders of THE on notice" that it intends to maintain its flexibility to buy or sell and that therefore it may well be selling THP shares. California Standard Orders Tankers

Standard Oil of California reports it has ordered two supertankers of 264,000 tons from Alitsubishi Heavy Industries of Japan. The order brings to 24 the number of large cargo carriers involved in Standard's construction program. The company has nine supertankers in service in its international operations and the remaining 15 vessels are due to be delivered by 1975.

Venezuelan Oil Production Slows

Venezuela la gradualle losing its oil merkets to Middle Fast producers, the central bank of Venezuela says in its year-end report. It says the volume of foreign sales of crude dropped 4.7 percent between January and October, and the sales of by-products dropped 5 percent up to September: This was partially due to a lower growth rate of consumer demand on world markets during 1971, but also to the fact that oil companies have begun to show preference for their Middle East operations, the report says A factor favoring Middle East countries during 1971 was a reduction in transport costs. High transport costs favor the shorter Venezuela-United States routes, the bank says.

U.K. Working Day Loss Highest Since the General Strike of 1926

LONDON. Dec. 31 (Reuters).—Strikes have cost Eritain more lost working days this year than in any other year since 1936, when there was a general strike.

But, according to figures released today by the Department of Employment, most of the lost days were accounted for by two long strikes early in the year and the number of strikes involved—2.075—was nearly half the figure for 1970.

The department's statistics showed a loss of 13.2 million working days for the first 11 months of this year and attributed eight million of them to strikes by postmen and Ford employees—two major buttles against a government policy of wage restraint. The figures compared with 10.9

million days last year and 24 million only five years ago. The department pointed out that Britain is losing fewer work days for the size of its work force than Canada, the United States and Italy—although it is well ahead of Switzerland, Sweden and West Germany,

> Put us to the test on your behalf

In view of today's highly uncertain securities markets, now might be the ideal time for you to put our many years of experience to the test...on your behalf.

How? Very easily,
If your present holdings of American securities are in excess of a quarter of a million dollars, we will be glad to furnish you with an appraisal of your portfolio—
based on present market conditions—without charge

If you would like to take advantage of our offer-or simply learn more about Van Strum & Towns's forty-four years of accumulated knowledge and skill in the supervision of investment portfolios—just write to Mr. Henry Renard, Senior Vice President, at the address below, Again, there is no charge or obligation.

How to gain the advantages of investment management for a $5,000 to $50,000 portfolio

If the money you have today is to grow in the future toward more income, or for education, travel, leisure, retirement, it must be kept working full time to achieve your goals. Yet you may find that you are actually losing ground due to inflation, taxes or lack of time for iovestment decisions. To help solve this problem, clients in 55 countries have turned to The Danforth Associates Iovestment Management Plan. It has, we believe, proved especially efficient in providing continuing capital growth supervision for portfolios of from $5,000 to $50,000—on behalf of people who recognize and can share the risks and rewards of common stock investments. The cost is modest, as low as $100 per year. For a complimentary copy of a 42-page report describing this tested plan, its complete 10-year "performance record," and how it may help you now, simply write Dept. Q.47.

PROBLEMS OF KNOWLEDGE AND FREEDOM The Russell Lectures

By Noam Chomsky, Pantheon, 111 pp. $4.95,

Reviewed by Christopher Lehmann-Haupt

IN the Dec. 30 issue of The New York Review of Books, Noam Chomsky, the Massachu-setts Institute of Technology Technology linguistics professor, offers a critique of B. P. Skinner's "Beyond Freedom and Dignity" that crumbles the Harvard behaviorist's current best seller to its very foundations. Since this reviewer claimed of Skinner's book that "if you read only one book this year, this is probably the one you ought to choose," (IHT. Sept. 29, 1971) It is only fair that I append that judgment now with the recommendation that if you read only one critique of Skin-ner's book this year, as you most certainly should, then Chomsky's is the one you ought to choose For if Skinner has knocked the fragile shell of human freedom and dignity off its high wall, then Chomsky has put Humpty Dumpty together again.

Unhappily, however, Chomsky has somewhat undermined his cause in his latest book, "Problems of Knowledge and Freedom," which is the printed (and slightly revised; version of the two ctures he gave earlier this year at Trinity College, Cambridge, in honor of the late Bertrand Russell. For the deepest impression that this book leaves behind is that the human animal is indeed a loathsome creature and that Skinner's view of man as a grab bag of conditioned responses is not pearly the intellectual scandal that Chomsky asserts it to be in his devastating critique.

Of course Chomsky does not explicitly admit such a view in Problems of Knowledge and Freedom." Indeed the first of his two lectures, "On Interpreting the World," is an elaboration of the ideas that inform the Skinner review. Here. in this lecture, Chomsky is speaking in his roles as philosopher and one of the world's foremost ploneers in the field of linguistics, and paying homage to Russell's monumental exploration into the nature of human knowledge.

Here, in precise and logical language. Chomsky demonstrates the limitations of empiricism; hypothesises the existence in man of a system of innate ideas; proposes that one way to apprehend this system might be through an investigation of language; pro-ceeds to do so with some rudi-mentary examples; indicates through these examples "the level of 'deep structure'" at which semantically significant grammatical relations are directly expressed"; proposes that his approach may be one of the possible ways of characterizing "the structure of various systems of human nowledge and belief"; and concludes that "the study of human psychology has been diverted into side channels by a unwillingness to pose the protients of how experience is relate to knowledge and belief . . . an that "No matter how successful: the study of atimulus-respons habit structures, and so on pursued, it will always fail t touch these central questions.*

Here is an extremely valuable statement—a model of scholarl perspicacity and caution, a des explication of some of Chomely most important ideas, and a pro found, if delicate, defense of the "autonomous man" that Skinne . has tried to reason out of ex:

But in his second lecture, "O Changing the World," which i. intended to honor Bertrand Rus. sell, the political moralist an founder of a tribunal to investi gate America's conduct of th war in Vietnam, Chomsky ha tord spart the fragile fabric o his argument.

For in his denunciation o American industrial society and its involvement in Southcast Adv -a denunciation whose rhetori rises implacably to the heights bitterness and sarcasm (whethe justified is not the issue herei-Chotnsky presents an overwhelm ing case for ponautonomous mar demonstrates nothing but th ease with which all men, including intellectuals, can be could thought to perform the state's de sires "even in a relatively ope society where access to information is not limited," and produce not one particle of evidence a to how such a society migh transform itself into one tha reflects human freedom and dignity. So one closes his hool in a state of despair.

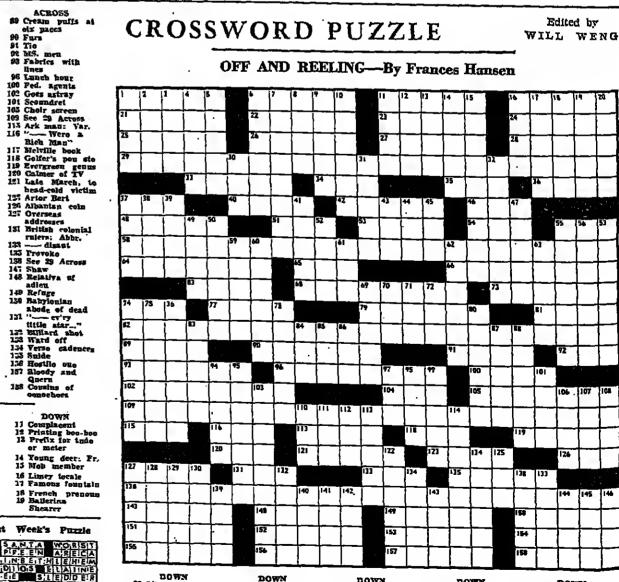

Now I realize that one mus distinguish between Chomsky the philosopher and Chomsky thi polemicist. And I can see that the dualistic strategy employee here is partly meant to honor Russell, who was himself a man who thought first and then acted on his ideas after. And fur-thermore I concedo that my reading of this book may be an indulgence of the very form of despair that Chomsky condemns in the followers of Skinner. But by failing to bridge the gap between thought and polem-ics, by neglecting to give any bint of how we might go about the hard practical work of affirming human freedom and dignity, by offering no explanation for our present plight other than that all men (except Russell) are grab bags of conditioned responses does not Prof. Chomsky invite such despair?

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 31 (AP) -Coaches Chuck Fairbanks of Oklahoma and Raiph Jordan of Auburn agreed today that the to devastate Auburn has little similarity to the way Oklahoma

"They are similar in that they both line up in a full house backfield," said Jordan, whose Tigers were whipped 31-7 by an Alabama team that held the ball about 75 percent of the time in the Dec. 5 game.

But Alabama used more split men and when the ball was snapped there was very little similarity in what they did and what. we've seen Oklahoma do in the films we've seen," said Jordan. Since that defeat to Alabama, there has been much speculation on bow well Auburn could stop the Sconer wishbone, which led the nation in total offense, in

The players, enjoying them-selves through pregame festivities all week with some practice thrown in each day, approached the game quite differently from fans and coaches. This game is not for a national title or even a very high final ranking, and the players seem to be relaxed.

Donnie Wigginton, the little quarterback who kept Texas on course toward the Cotton Bowl while Phillips recovered from injuries, chuckled at the apprehensive coaches, Darrell Royal of Texas and Joe Paterno of Penn State, who have been rather gloomy about prospects posting a 20-9 victory.

Nevertheless, most of the Nehraska players maintain they can move the foother against any team in any situation. As posi-tive proof they recall the win-ning 74-yard march in the closing minutes against Oklahoma on Thanksgiving Day.

"One of our characteristics is when something has to be done we do it," said tight end Jarry List: "I guess you could say we're a lazy offense, not in the sense that we don't work hard, but that we get complacent sometimes if we're not pressed.".

That should not be a problem against Alabarra. The Crimson Tide defense is bypically Bryant's, small and quick, the same sort that humiliated Nebrasks in the Orange and Sugar Bowls of 1966

At that time, however, the Commuskers were plodders, hig men who put heavy pressure on an inside attack, but could not catch the quick Alabama backs and receivers once they got out-

That has changed. "We learned our lesson," said Devancy, who has since gone after quick, rangy linemen, with good size and mobility. mobility.

Alabama is particularly con-cerned with Rich Glover. The 6foot-1, 230-pound all-America middle guard made 22 tackles against Oklahoma and proudly proclaims, "I feel I can handle any man who gets in my way. I like the challenge of a big game." Glover anchors a 5-2 defense that has allowed a pairry 2018 yards total offense, 85.9 yards rushing and 8.2 points per game, the third best scoring defense in the nation.

"We did give up a whole lot against Oklahoma," said Glover, recalling the Sooners' 467 yards total offense. "But all I know is we stopped 'em when we had to stop 'em, and we won the foothall game. You can't ask for much more."

Glover claims that Johnny Musso, Alabama's all-America back, will have a difficult time wherever he roams. "I like the dude. I met him at a banquet a couple weeks ago," Glover said, "but that don't mean I'm not gonna be there where he is."

Maryland routed ninth-rated St. John's, 90-69, in the final of the Maryland Invitation Christmas Tournament. Jim O'Brien scored 20 points for the Terrapins, who won their eighth game in nine starts. However, Len Ehnore, who collected only seven points but grabbed 18 rebounds, blocked numerous shots and stole several passes, was named the tourney's most valuable player. North Carolina Wins

North Carolina's globetrotting Tarbeels were down Bradley, 75-69, for the Sugar Bowl title, For the fourth-ranked Tarheels, it was their sixth victory in eight days and their third tourney championship. Previously, they won the Big Four in North Carolina and the International Christmas Tournament in Spain. Virginia, No. 11, remained un-heaten, defeating The Citadel, 77-72, for the championship in the Palmetto Classic. Barry Parkhill's 21 points led the Cavaliers, who gained their ninth victory. Ron Thomas's 28 points and Jim Price'e 25 helped 15th-ranked Louisville whip Fordham, 96-82, for the Holiday Festival Championship. The Cardinals, during the semifinals, changed their tune and stood at attention for the playing of the anthem before the final game.

Once-beaten Missouri won its first Big Eight Conference preseason championship since 1964, trimming Kansas State, 67-58, for its 10th victory. Sophomore Al Eberhard paced the Tigers with 21 points. Charlie Mitchell pumped in 33

Brundage Tells Olympic Groups:

LAUSANNE, Switzerland, Dec. 31 (AP).—National Olympic committees were warned today they risk disqualification of their entire teams from the Sapporo Winter Games in Feb-ruary if they nominate entries which do not qualify under the new strict amateur code.

Pro' Could Disqualify Team

The warning came in a letter by Avery Brundage, president of the International Olympic Committee, vowing that "rigorous measures will be taken to ensure that the Games remain dignified and according to the regulations." "Please take notice that anyone who violates the rules in submitting entries risks disqualification of the entire team." said the letter addressed to all national Olympic committees.

The new move by the 84-year-old Brundage, who has proclaimed an all-out effort to keep the Games "tlean, pure, and honest," could produce a spectacular showdown right at the opening of the Winter Olympics. This would be the first opportunity to take any action because the International Olympic Committee does not meet

Export Ban on 'Important' Art Sought in U.K.

LONDON, Dec. 31 (AP).—Government experts, worried about the loss of painting masterpieces to foreign buyers, want to ban exports of art considered to be important to Britain,

In its 1970-71 report, the Reviewing Committee on the Export of Works of Art urged the government to apply the ban to paintings worth £25,000 or more which the committee considered to be of national importance Other measures urged by the

• An annual grant to the committee of more than £250,000 to enable it to save more works of art from export. The committee's present grant is £150,000

The committee said that efforts to prevent works of art from being exported had proved less effective over the past five years. With the present high prices being offered for important paintings the expert said there was a real danger of the existing export control system breaking down

If You Think Last Year Was Bad...

PARIS (TET).—It's time once again to get out the old crystal typewriter and, cribbing madly from French astrologers, to let you know whether your New Year's Day headache will persist all through 1972.

The answer is unfortunately yes. The coming year will be one of chaos, Mme. Soleil

Mme. Solell, the biggest star of French astrology, is also known for her ability to soothe, so she adds that if 1972 will be a year of change, much of the change will be for the better: the Common Market will finally get going and younger men in the 30-35 age group will unseat their elders in executive positions. However, all world currencies will have problems in 1972.

But take heart. Another astrologer, Paul Colombet, says that 1972 will be a good year. for France at least-all this despite his predictions of low morale, drug, economic and student problems and postal strikes in June , Mr. Colombet's cheeriest prediction is that there will be good weather in August, but as a killjoy and a realist he must perforce add that there will also be drownings and stomachaches.

Sometimes the stars clash. Mr. Colombet says that March 10 and the days following will be swell for everyone, while astrologer Dan Martin, who has a stand amid the housewares in the basement of the Samaritaine department store, says that on March 10 everyone will be nervous, impatient and incapable of understanding anyone

As usual the astrologers predict that Brigitte Bardot will find a new lover and that Queen Elizabeth II faces problems. The United States will have race problems and, says astrologer Jean Vlaud. "It is possible that the White House may commit a serious error concerning the problem of Southeast In other words, in 1972 things are what they used to be.

If this year's predictions sound much like last year's and the year before's, they are for the most part delivered by the same old ries an ad for a bearded chap who bills himself as the youngest astrologer in France, but for the most part the old photos and urgent slogans ("Her extraordinary predictions," "The Seer of the stars," "Superying revelations," "The most famous astrologer of Lyon," "Favorite of le Tout Paris," "Favorite of several American millionaires") are all too familiar.

Still, among the oldies one may be permitted to have a few favorites: Monsieur H. Errera, "who made Rosalie Dubois lose 44 kilos" (who on earth is Rosalie Dubois?). the romantic Corinne, whose photo makes her look like one of those three-named lady novelists of the 20s and who summarizes her life story as follows:

Beautiful. heiress of a leading French family, she received in a fashionable boarding school the education traditional in her family: music, dance, painting, literature and foreign languages. Her looks, her breeding, her dowry made her the ideal match for a well-born suitor. A great wedding, then total disaster, lost abandoned, ruined, she reached the depths of despair. Taken on a trip around the world by charitable acquaintances, she found salvation on a small Polynesian island. An old sorcerer taught her his secrets and freed her from the shyness that had marred her youth. Since then Corinne, transformed, never separates herself from her precious talisman and with it she wants to help those who, shy, unhappy, betrayed, misunderstood, envy the paradise of the Tabitians, the happiest people on earth. Many are those who owe to her their success in passing exams, getting their driver's li-cense and winning the tiercé and loterie nationale. . . ."

If Corinne has her feet firmly on the ground, the one airy, or perhaps windy, astrological novelty this season is "Le Retour des Astrologues," a dead serious sociological study on the revival of astrology which the weekly magazine Le Nouvel Observateur has published as the third book in a series that started with a study of abortion and a work by John Kenneth Galbraith on the crisis in the industrial society.

In this team study of home heroscopicus, the authors note that astrology has been making a comeback since about 1930. A prominent lawyer pleads differently according to whether the judge is Pisces or Leo, a judge considers a prisoner's sign in deciding whether he is likely to return to crime, a doctor has an astrologer study his patients' horoscopee and pays him a monthly fee.

"We have been informed several times," the authors state, "that for the Apollo program NASA secretly employs astrologers to study the astronauts and their missions."

The big period of modern mass estrology came, say the authors, in 1970 with the appearances of the Astroflash system of astrology by computer and of Madame Soleil. who started broadcasting on Europe No. 1 with enormous success in September, 1970.

Mme, Soleil is the "poor man's astrologer" to whom practical socio-economic questions are addressed, such as "Should I sell my shop?" Astroflash is for the middle classes who are less interested in the future than in themselves ("You are kindly, sincere, generous to a fault"). They represent the two leading tendencies in today's mass astrology. The book is, of course, much more complicated than this resumé suggests, and is fashionably full of such modern French terms as le marketing, le business game, le decision maker, une human relation and le home. One of the authors contributed an earlier study on the same themes to Le Nouvel Observateur magazine and it awakened a lot of interest and netted him a lot of readers' letters. Most of them, he admits with chagrin, simply wanted the address of

PEOPLE: Disc Jockey Passes Out Drinking on the Job

A Louisville, Ky., disc jockey. Gary Burbank, passed out on the air Thursday after downing three-quarters of a fifth of whiskey during a 2 1 2-hour radio broadcast. The 29-year-old disc jockey at station WAKY said he wanted to demonstrate the effects of sicohol as a warning to listeners to limit their drinking during the new year's holiday. Just before leaving the air Burbank muttered, "I'm smashed," and told technicians to "take over . . I think I'm going to pass out." Borbank was given breathalizer tests throughout the broadcast. The last reading before hs passed out showed a blood alcohol content of 14 percent. Kentucky law holds any person intoxicated on a reading of .10. The station said it received a deluge of telephone calls commenting on the broadcast, most of them favorable. But it sald it received a few calls from local bars "asking Gary to come in for a last drink."

"The United States will intensify its efforts toward reaching Mars and the Soviets, besides landing their first men on the moon, will dazzle the whole world with an exceptional scientific feat. Also in science, notable progress will be made in the fight against cancer."
